BOYS OF TUCKAHOE DON'T BREAK LAW

Club That Put End to Juvenile
Offenses Asked to Tackle
Problem Nationally

TUCKAHOE, N. Y., June 9—Organized ten years ago to reduce juvenile delinquency here, the Tuckahoe Police Associates Boys Club has been so successful in teaching citizenship and in fostering friendship between policemen and youths that officials of Middletown, Conn., proposed today that the club serve as a nucleus for a national organization to be known as the Police Associates of America.

Representatives of the Middletown officials came here this afternoon and outlined the proposal to Patrolman Milton Gibbons, founder and president of the Tuckahoe club. Patrolman Gibbons said his organization had been copied throughout the United States and that a national organization might be formed.

The club had its inception here when six boys were arraigned in 1930 before Children's Court Judge George W. Smyth on charges of stealing money from a gum vending machine. To save the defendants from going to reform school Patrolman Gibbons established the club in the basement of his home with the six boys as charter members.

Today the organization has 318 members, with more than 200 "graduates," and not one since the first six has ever been arrested. Ten years ago, Patrolman Gibbons said, Tuckahoe had about sixty cases of juvenile delinquency annually. In the last three years there has not been a case.

The children are kept off the streets at night through participation in athletic contests, band practice and other events conducted at the Main Street School here. The Kiwanis and Lions Clubs contribute equipment to the club and occasionally the funds are increased by sales of flags and merchandise.

Girls were admitted to membership a year ago for the first time.

"The organization has done an excellent job in building morale and leadership in youth," Judge Smyth said this afternoon. "The idea of helping children appeals to policemen and the idea of having policemen as friends appeals to the children."
